

GATES HIT
HARD IN RAID.

Wall Street Hears that the Big Speculator and His Followers Have Lost $15,000,000.

FINANCIERS AFTER HIM.

All the Stocks in Which He Is Interested Hammered to Low Levels and Attack Renewed—Vanderbilt Against Him.

John W. Gates, the Western speculator, whose losses in the big bear raids on the stock market are said to aggregate several million dollars—some put it at $7,000,000—has apparently been made the target for a combined attack from Wall street operators.

His followers are suffering with him and good calculations say the Western crowd, as they are termed in the financial district, have so far lost $15,000,000. Every stock issue with which Gates has been prominently identified for the last six months has been made to feel the brunt of continued assaults.

He was the leader of the speculation pool in E. & O., which sent the stock to 117. It crossed par on the downward slant to-day, and for a brief period sold at 89 7/8.

Jointly, with the Moore Brothers, he led the recent attempt to depress W. K. Vanderbilt from the Chicago & North-western, which resulted in Vanderbilt retaining control and the Westerners in acquiring a lot of Northwestern stock at high prices.

He was likewise the central figure in the gigantic Louisville and Nashville deal whereby the Rothschilds lost control of the road and the stock was sent from 408 to 158.

To-day the stock sold on the exchange at 128 3/4, and it was said that Mr. Gates was a large holder of the stock until recently.

The Rock Island contingent—composed of Judge W. H. and J. H. Moore, W. B. McFalls, Daniel G. Reid, John W. Gates and their western associates—is said to be in a vulnerable market position and the Wall street coterie that is waging war against it is improving the opportunity.

A sensational attack upon the Rock Island common and preferred shares was the feature of the opening curb market to-day.

The common stock, which closed last night at 48 1/4, was forced down under heavy offerings to 42 1/4—a break of 6 points.

Under the same kind of pressure the preferred stock broke 4 1/2 points, selling down to 70 before its supporters could rally it.

The bonds also broke several points, and the demoralization in the series of Rock Island issues threatened disastrous consequences to many.

Wall street heard to-day that the Vanderbilt interests, who were attacked by the Moore-Gates-Reid-Leads combination last spring in Chicago and North-western, and the Belmont-Rothschilds in Louisville and Nashville because of the Gates attack, had joined forces to punish Gates.

Whether this is true cannot be conclusively demonstrated, but it is asserted positively that the combined losses of the Western contingent in the sensational bear raids of the last three weeks will exceed $15,000,000.

Mr. Gates has been in Chicago for some time. From that point to-day he paid his respects to the Wall street men who are said to be after him.

This statement, accredited to him, was telegraphed from there to-day.

"The slump in the stock market is simply the result of operations of the bear pool. The members of it are a lot of Wall street bandits, Presidents or fellows who are against the Government, against American justice, against everything but their own temporary profit."

There is absolutely nothing wrong with the financial situation except that these bandits have been at work a little.

Arrest of a Holland House Porter Brings to Light Some Remarkable Hotel Robberies.

MRS. MATHESON A VICTIM.

James Bolan, the Porter, Attempted to Pawn Her $2,500 Necklace for $35—Watch of Steel Trust Magnate Taken.

One of the largest jewelry robberies in recent years was made public this afternoon when a porter of the Holland House was arrested while trying to pawn for $35 a pearl necklace which cost $2,500.

The necklace was identified as being a part of the collection of jewels stolen from Mrs. Matheson, of Huntington, L. I., in the Holland House, on April 4, last. A pigskin case containing $12,000 worth of jewels was taken from her room. The fact of this robbery was not made public by the police.

Patrick Bolan, the porter, was arrested while trying to pawn the necklace in a shop in the lower part of the Bowery for $35. He evidently did not know the value of the ornament.

The pawnbroker did and called for the police. Bolan was taken to the Jefferson Market Court, where a search of his clothes brought forth two gold rings—one of them set with an opal of great size and exceptionally fine, and surrounded by diamonds. The other was set with three large rubies, worth at least $500 each.

Mrs. Matheson's Necklace.

The necklace was soon recognized as being a part of the collection stolen from Mrs. Matheson. Mr. and Mrs. Matheson stopped at the Holland House the night of April 4 last, having been in the city at a theatre. In the morning Mrs. Matheson discovered that her pigskin jewel bag had been stolen. It contained $12,000 worth of jewels, among them the pearl necklace which Bolan to-day tried to pawn.

A search of Bolan's room, at No. 325 East Houston street, was made by the police, and there they found a large assortment of jewelry. Among the articles was a solid gold watch, apparently of much value, on the back of which was engraved: "Presented to Mrs. R. H. Matheson by the Employees of the Missouri Furnace Company, Nov. 11, 1892."

Three other watches were found in the room. There were also rings and jeweled chains.

Found Necklace, He Said.

Bolan told the police he had found the pearl necklace in a bureau drawer in Room No. 325 of the Holland House. That was the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Matheson.

None of the other jewelry found on him has been identified as belonging to the Matheson collection. During the spring of 1901, when the jewelry was stolen in the Holland House from Mrs. R. H. Matheson, Bolan was a waiter at the United States Hotel, Austria. Several other losses have been reported during the year.

The police hope to connect Bolan with the gang which is credited with the numerous robberies in the Waldorf and other large hotels.

DRAGGED HIM OUT OF BED.

Spanish General Arrested on False Charge Is Set Free.

Gen. Manuel Moragas, a Spanish general, of No. 294 East Sixteenth street, who was in charge of the arsenal at Manila when Dewey called there, was dragged out of bed this morning on a warrant charging him with attempting blackmail. He was arraigned in the Tombs Police Court later and discharged.

The general speaks no English and has two guides, Carlo Garcia and Sethele Santa, who have piloted him about the city. They paid, they say, Angelo de Balto, who has charge of the Ward line firemen, $10 each to get passage to Cuba, and when they went to the dock and were refused permission to board ship, demanded their money back.

Not getting it they enlisted the services of Gen. Marano, against whom de Balto swore out a complaint. In court to-day the tables were turned and de Balto was held in $500 bail for obtaining the money.

MRS. MOLINEUX TO LIVE IN BROOKLYN.

She Spends the Day in This City Packing Up Her Effects at the Murray Hill Hotel and Returns to Her Husband Late This Afternoon.

Justice Lambert Makes a Withering Reply to the Statement of Harry Cornish that the Charge to the Jury Was Prejudiced in Favor of the Defendant.

Mrs. Roland B. Molineux, loaded down with pasteboard boxes and other packages, left the Murray Hill at 4 o'clock this afternoon in a cab. She said she was going to Brooklyn to join her husband.

"I came over here to-day to pack up," she said, "but I had so much to do that I could not complete the work, and will have to come back to-morrow. I shall then move my effects to Brooklyn. I don't know where we are going to live or what we are going to do. I have been too busy to think about anything but my own happiness and the vindication of my husband."

Mrs. Molineux had been at the hotel since noon arranging for her departure. She drove over from the home of Gen. Molineux in Brooklyn in a closed cab and was cordially greeted and congratulated by the employees and many of the guests of the hotel.

RESULT AS SHE EXPECTED.

Mrs. Molineux was asked:

"What do you think of the result of the trial?"

"The result?" she asked, beaming with smiles. "Why, the result! The result is all over. It was just as I had expected and for what I hoped."

"How do you feel about it?"

"How would any woman feel whose husband has just been acquitted of such a charge. I don't know how I feel. I feel too good to talk."

"Where are you going to live?"

"Oh, I don't know. We'll live anywhere so long as we are together."

"Then the estrangement is at an end?"

"If you call it an estrangement—yes."

"What are your plans for the immediate future?"

"I have no plans. I don't know what we will do. We have only talked it over in an informal way and nothing has been decided."

The elevator came and whisked her away to an upper floor. Between floors she had the elevator stopped and called down to a bellboy:

"Have the keys to my room sent up and tell the clerk to come up. I want to see him."

CROWD WATCHES THE MOLINEUX HOME.

Crowds surrounded the Molineuxs homestead in Fort Greene place to-day, constantly growing in size as the afternoon advanced. It was evident that young Mrs. Molineux was the object sought by the later arrivals, as her failure to return caused a report that she was not coming back.

This report was discounted at 4:30 o'clock, when a truck drove up and a small trunk like the one taken away by the young woman in September was unloaded. The driver said that he got the trunk in Manhattan, but would not say that it came from the Murray Hill Hotel, where Mrs. Molineux has boarded.

At 4 o'clock, Molineux, dapper and smiling, descended the steps of his father's house and walked down the block to his aunt's home, No. 133 Fort Greene place. He remained at Mrs. Burnham's for thirty minutes and then returned home, remarking to Policeman John McSherry as he entered through a long line of spectators:

"You seem to be having a pretty busy day, Mr. Officer."

JUSTICE LAMBERT SCORES CORNISH.

"It is the hit bird that flutters," was the way that Justice Lambert replied to-day to the criticism that Harry S. Cornish made of his charge to the jury at the Molineux trial. Cornish had said: "I congratulate the Judge on his plea for the prisoner."

Continuing Justice Lambert said:

"I really think that I should not dignify this man with any reply. I will take no action against him for criticism of the Court. Why should I? Of course if the matter were brought before me officially that would be different. The press has been particularly accurate in this trial. Everything has been recorded as it actually happened, so that I have no reason to doubt the accuracy of the quotation of Cornish."

A TERROR IN THE FUTURE.

"I repeat the question, why should I dignify his criticism with a reply, especially as I might be called upon some day to try him for the crime that Molineux was accused of?"

"Anything that Cornish can say, or will say, is of no importance to me. He was brought into the case prominently by ex-Gov. Black."

"If a man had dropped out of the sky to try this case—a man who had never heard of Cornish or Molineux—he would find as much legal evidence against Cornish as there was presented to me against Molineux."

"My charge was fair and impartial. I have been praised by the press for the manner that the trial was conducted and I wish to say that there are dozens of Justices throughout the State with more legal talent and more brains than I have who would have done the same as I did."

"Just to show what a pure, innocent mind ex-Gov. Black has, and how simple he is to the way of the world, when that jury sent in word that it had reached a verdict within a few minutes after the case had been given to it, Mr. Black turned to Weeks and said, 'If this is a conviction I want you to make a motion for a new trial immediately after the foreman makes the announcement.'"

"Not on your life," said Weeks, laughing.

"He knew what the indications were. Any child would have known that it was an acquittal, but Black's innocent, unsophisticated mind couldn't comprehend that victory was at hand."

"I repeat, that Cornish is not worthy of reply."

SELLS TWO PLAYS.

Roland B. Molineux to-day disposed of two plays, written by him in prison. One is a comedy, the other a melodrama, and both will be produced next season. The manager who bought them is a man of standing in his profession and believes that his purchases will net large returns both to himself and the author.

Negotiations for the sale of the plays had been going on for some time, but Molineux would not close the deal while he was in jail, fearing that such a proceeding might smack of notoriety seeking. The chances are that he will continue to write plays, and perhaps stories.

"Molineux's plays," said the manager who will produce them, "do
